BFW EnglishA History of AP® Innovation

For fifteen years, Bedford, Freeman & Worth High School Publishers has focused on delivering top quality resources to support AP® teachers and students.

2005

50 Essays and accompanying Teacher's Manual publish creating the first-ever student and teacher materials created specifically for AP® Language.

2007

The Language of Composition publishes and is an instant bestseller. It's the first-ever textbook written for the AP® Language course by AP® teachers.

2013

BFW includes a test bank, teacher flash drive, and annotated teacher's edition for all future publications. This becomes part of the standard BFW teacher resource program across all disciplines, changing all expectations of what AP® publishers do for teachers.

2018

College Board releases first-ever Pre-AP® standards and BFW responds with the first (and only) Pre-AP® texts, resulting in the first-ever, complete Pre-AP® to AP® English program. With the publication of Foundations of Language & Literature, BFW has a complete grade 9-12 English program.

2010

Literature & Composition publishes and makes waves as the first "unanthology" with thematic-based chapters rather than genre-based readings chapters.

2012

BFW becomes the first company to have a complete e-book for both AP® English courses. With nine full-length works and the ability to annotate and do close reading directly in the text, we start to fully support digital classrooms.

2019

We've got you covered! BFW fully updates all AP® text programs to align with the new CED frameworks in time for the start of class in September.

2020

Your feedback informs a brand new, innovative approach to American Literature and nonfiction American Literature & Rhetoric plus a brand new, fully scaffolded approach to Honors 10 Advanced Language & Literature, 2e.
